Environment

We understand the increasingly central role environmental compliance and liability issues play within the business community.

Gornitzky & Co. offers an experienced Environment team that provides our clients with legal advice relating to the many different commercial, financial and regulatory aspects of environmental law. We represent corporate clients in complex environmental litigation cases before the Israeli courts and act in their defense in cases of private actions, class actions, regulatory compliance lawsuits, administrative proceedings and other actions brought by environmental and government entities.

Our Environment team also counsels clients on licensing matters, environmental aspects of large scale infrastructure projects (such as desalination plants and paving of central highways), statutory and regulatory consents for development and public infrastructure tenders, real estate transactions and other projects.

We also advise some of Israel's largest industrial plants and financial institutions on potential project risks and the implementation of environmental risk management solutions.

The firm's Environment practice is enhanced by our expertise in additional practice areas, such as Energy and Natural Resources, Cleantech and Litigation. With experience in large-scale projects, such as the recent natural gas discoveries off-shore of Israel, our lawyers are able to provide comprehensive, multidisciplinary legal support to all clients.
